about the connection

dub is a phone design concept from young product designer Ben Arent.

This is my personal design response to all of the hype over the iPhone. dub is a phone for Facebook. It builds on an existing and future-looking ecosystem of connection and communication. It's not a music device with a phone; dub is a truly innovative communication platform.

facebook.

facebook dub has a unique interactive feature that will revolutionise our social society. You no longer have to be afraid of strangers as now everyone is in your extended network.

dub contains a unique Rfid with your unique facebook ID # embedded into it. When two or more dub's are in one location dub can triangulate and position where that person is. With an advance video, and spatial algorithms dub will be able to search visible areas when linking the video and rfid data together.

Example: Your in a nightclub, looking for someone to chat up but all too often you end up chatting up the bouncers girl friend. dub will allow you to search the crowd for any set parameters or partners. In this case Ben is looking for someone to dance with, the dub searches the crowd for single women, in his age range.

The dancing will have to do the rest.

Roller Interface

All buttons are scrollers, this allows for fast navigation of the the information displayed on the dub. The lower long roller is used in conjunction with the ball roller to achieve a complete 5 axis control.

Braille Input

a unquie key pad design, that is based on a QWERTY keyboard. As no one looks at a mobile keypad for letters braille is embedded to distinguishes characters and make secret under the desk texting easier.

Protective Screen

A top scratch resistant screen to protect those OLED's. The screen will have a Electrochromatic layer, that will allow for instant privacy.

Flexiable OLED

dub takes full advantages of recent advance in flexible displays. This creates a endless feeding visual edge of news. Facebook news never stops neither dose the screen

Custom Casing

The top shell will be avabile in a range of custom colors.

Ceramic Base

The base will be made of a super tough ceramic stronger than steel.
